30 Purpose of grant or amendment	To enable colleges to identify students who have earned or nearly earned enough credits for a credential but, because of limited advising resources, may not be aware of their opportunity to receive it. By scaling the use of a sophisticated technology developed by Wake Technical Community College across all community colleges, these students can be efficiently identified systemwide. Wake Technical Community College has developed a technology to identify their students who have some college credit and no degree. This tool, called Finish First can analyze thousands of student transcripts simultaneously against all programs criteria to determine potential credential completers. This technology is to be replicated across the Community College system to potentially identify over 30,000 non-completers who may be eligible to receive credentials.
